SECTION - A READING SKILLS (20 Marks)

1. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow: (10M)

- India continues to enjoy the No.1 position as the leading information technology, business outsourcing and consulting destination of the past decades. In fact, the other emerging powerhouses of the BRIC nations are all hot destinations for future investments.
- 2. But we cannot rest on our laurels. It is imperative that we strive to become the finest research hub the world has ever seen. We can achieve this distinction by investing in our schools - the places where future generations will develop skills and resources that will drive our country's economic growth.
- The Royal Society's seminal 2011 report, 'Knowledge, Networks and 3. Nations: Global Scientific Collaboration in the 21st Century', states that even in the difficult economic times we now face, national governments need to maintain investment in their science base "in order to secure economic prosperity, tap into new sources of innovation and growth, and sustain vital connections across the global research landscape".
- Currently, a mere 0.25% of India's GDP is spent on research and development (R&D). The government proposes to step this up to 2% of GDP, with half of that amount coming from private industry and half from the public sector. While admirable in its intentions, the goal falls short, Israel, for example, spends 6% of GDP on scientific research. Switzerland and Sweden both spend 4% of their GDPs on research and even China is approaching 2%.

- 5. India is in danger of falling behind other nations in the race to build an advanced, 21st century economy. True, the country has increased its expenditures on education as a percentage of GDP to 4% during 2011-12 school years from 3.3% in 2004-2005. But compared to the other BRIC countries, we need to do more. Brazil, for instance spends some 5.7% of its GDP on education. Smaller developing nations like Ethiopia spend 4.7%, and even Botswana spends 7.8% of its GDP on education, according to the World Bank.
- 6. Make no mistake: India needs a sustainable pipeline of scientific research. To build this pipeline, it is imperative to have strong investments in education. A population grounded in the sciences will strengthen our industries and government. Our nation will have home- grown minds working on the myriad problems facing society and improving the lives of everyone.
- 7. I encourage young scientists and students to consider careers in research-whether in corporate laboratories or academic institutions. In the private sector, my colleagues and I set up the Infosys Science Foundation (ISF), a not-for- profit trust, to promote scientific research in India. The ISF has set up a series of public lectures by the winners of the Infosys Prize that we hope will kindle a spark of interest in young minds.
- 8. The high point of our year is when we award the Infosys Prize to honour the outstanding achievements of researchers and scientists in the fields of engineering and computer science, humanities, life sciences, mathematics, physical sciences and social sciences. The Infosys Prize highlights the impact research has had on areas important to India's growth.
- 9. One of our recent winners, Professor Kalyanmoy Deb, was honoured for his work in engineering and computer science. His work has profound implications on a range of practical ideas from how the financial markets operate to how we can find sources of fuel in the future. The winner of the Infosys Prize in life sciences, Dr Imran Siddiqui, worked on clonal seed formation in plants that has significant implications for agriculture, especially in the developing world. The work of our winners is meaningful, impactful and inspiring.

a. To whom and why is the Infosys prize awarded?b. Which invention has significant implication in the field of agriculture?c. In which field India is facing the danger of falling behind other countries?
d. Why India needs a sustainable pipeline of scientific research?

- 2. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below. (10M)
 - 1. For many years now, the governments have been promising the eradication of child labour in hazardous industries in India. But the truth is that despite all the rhetoric, no government so far has succeeded in eradicating this evil, nor has any been able to ensure compulsory Primary education for every Indian child. Between 60 and 100 million children are still at work instead of going to school and around 10 million are working in hazardous industries. India has the biggest child population of 380 million in the world plus the largest number of children who are forced to earn a living.
 - 2. We have many laws that ban child labour in hazardous industries. According to the Child Labour (Prohibition and Regulation) Act, 1986, the employment of children below the age of 14 in hazardous occupations has been strictly banned. But each state has different rules regarding the minimum age of employment. This makes implementation of these laws difficult.
 - 3. Also, there is no ban on child labour in non-hazardous occupations. The Act applies to the organised or factory sector and not to the unorganised or informal sector, where most children find employment as cleaners, servants, porters or waiters, among other forms of unskilled work. Thus, child labour continues because the implementation of the existing laws is lax.
 - 4. There are industries which have a special demand for child labour because of their nimble fingers, high level of concentration and capacity to work hard at abysmally low wages. The carpet industry in Uttar Pradesh and Kashmir employs children to make hand-knotted carpets. There are 80000 child workers in Jammu and Kashmir alone. In Kashmir, because of the political unrest, children are forced to work while many schools are shut. Industries like gem cutting and polishing, pottery and glass want to remain competitive by employing children.
 - 5. The truth is that it is poverty which is pushing children into the brutish labour market. We have 260 million people below the poverty line in India, a large number of them are women. Poor and especially woman-headed, families have no option but to push their little ones into this hard life in hostile conditions with no human or labour rights.
 - 6. There is a lobby which argues that there is nothing wrong with children working as long as the environment for work is conducive to learning new skills, but studies have shown that the children are made to do boring, repetitive and tedious jobs and are not taught new skills as they grow older. In these hell-holes, like the sweat shops of old, there is no hope.
 - 7. Children working in hazardous industries are prone to debilitating diseases which can cripple them for life. By sitting in cramped, damp and unhygienic spaces, their limbs become deformed for life. Inside matchstick, fireworks and glass industries, they are victims of bronchial diseases and tuberculosis. Their mental and physical development is permanently impaired by long hours of work. Once trapped, they can't get out of this vicious circle of poverty. They remain uneducated and powerless. Finally, in later years, they too are compelled to send their own children.

- 8. If at all the government was serious about granting children their rights, an intensive effort ought to havebeen made to implement the Supreme Court's directive of 1997 which laid down punitive action against employers of child labour. Only compulsory primary education can eliminate child labour.
- 9. Surely, if 380 million children are given a better life and elementary education, India's human capital would be greatly enhanced. But that needs, as former President Abdul Kalam says, "a Second Vision".
- 2.1 Answer each of the questions given below by choosing the most appropriate option:

(4x1=4)
